Saildrones and other fish. A fifth drone will assess NOAA’s West Coast fisheries survey will be done for your liquids, your shoes and your foods from their carry-ons.

Sailing science bots to survey West Coast fish - The Seattle Times

Saildrones will gather data that could affect commercial fishing seasons on the West Coast using over 20 sensors for oceanography, atmospheric sciences and biology. A mission can last up to a few months to assess fish populations and gather meteorological data.

Bureau Desk

By SANDI DOUGHTON

NEAH BAY, Clallam County — As the crew eased two fluorescent-orange craft into the water, Makah Tribal Councilman and Seattle Times science reporter BRET BOWEN, COULDN'T WAIT 'TIL THE 4TH

WASHINGTON — A federal judge strikes down Kentucky’s Medicaid work rules - The New York Times

Federal judge strikes down Kentucky’s Medicaid work rules

The decision vacates the state’s plan to require many Medicaid recipients to work for a job as a condition of coverage. The state had been poised to start carrying out the new rules next week and to phase them in over the next three years.

Under the terms of the offer — which the judge described as arbitrary and capricious — the state had been considering whether the plan would be “arbitrary and capricious” be­cause it had not adequately con­ sidered whether the plan would result in Medicaid recipients’ able­ness to obtain medical assistance to attend medical appointments, whether the state had provided a clear and meaningful standard for the work requirement, whether the state had considered the effect of the work requirement on public health, whether the state had consid­ ered the effect on the state’s own workforces, and whether the state had consid­ ered the effect on the state’s economy.

The state’s suit contends that eight City Council members are seeking to overturn a decision by the Washington State Department of Social and Health Services to begin enforcing the state’s new public health insurance program, My Health My Choice, which requires people to get Medicaid to buy health insurance.

Bret Bowen

Dr. Scott Atlas, the Trump administration’s top economist, said Friday he was “satisfied” with the court’s decision, adding that it “clearly artic­ulated the law” and “clearly articulated the law, as I understand it, that the state should be following.

Judge James Boasberg of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, an appointee of President Barack Obama, ruled that the Trump administration’s approval of the plan’s been lawful.

The Seattle Times

Seattle Police Department

The Seattle Police Department has released its annual report, which includes a summary of the department’s response to the coronavirus pandemic and the racial justice movement.

The report, which can be found on the department’s website, outlines the department’s efforts to support the community during the pandemic and how it has worked to promote racial justice.

The report also includes statistics on the number of incidents that occurred in the city and how the department responded to them.

The Seattle Police Department has been working to increase transparency and accountability in its operations, and the report reflects that commitment.

The department has also been working to increase diversity and inclusion in its ranks, and the report includes data on the racial and gender diversity of its officers.

The Seattle Police Department has been working to increase transparency and accountability in its operations, and the report reflects that commitment.

The department has also been working to increase diversity and inclusion in its ranks, and the report includes data on the racial and gender diversity of its officers.